

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

Excerpts from the Introduction, 1987 edition

A brief history
of the Cold War
and Anti-communism

PP1

Our fear that communism
might someday take over most of the world
blinds us to the fact that anti-communism
already has.

- Machael Parenti
"The Anti-Communist Impulse" (Random House, NY, 1969) pg. 4

PP2

It was in the early days of the fighting in Vietnam
that a Vietcong officer said to his American prisoner:

"You were our heroes after the War.

We read American books
and saw American films,
and a common phrase in those days was
'to be as rich and wise as an American.'

What happened?"

- Washington Post, 24 October 1965 article by Stanly Karnow.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

PP3

An American might have been asked something similar by

- a Guatemalan,
- an Indonesian,
- or a Cuban

during the ten years previous,

or by

- a Uruguayan,
- a Chilean
- or a Greek

in the decade subsequent (or following).

The remarkable international

- goodwill
- and credibility

enjoyed by the United States

at the close of the Second World War

was dissipated

- country by country,
- intervention by intervention.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

The opportunity to build the war-ravaged world anew,
to lay the foundations for

- peace,
- prosperity,
- and justice,

collapsed under the awful weight
of anti-communism. _^_

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

(Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 4 – 6)

PP4

The weight (of anti-communism) had been accumulating for some time;
indeed, since Day One of the Russian Revolution.

By the summer of 1918
some 13,000 American troops could be found in the newly-born state,
the future Union of the Soviet Socialist Republics.

Two years and thousands of casualties later,
the American troops left,
having failed in their mission
to “strangle at its birth” the Bolshevik state,
as Winston Churchill put it.

-Winston Churchill, “The Second World War, vol IV, ‘The Hinge of Fate’ (London, 1951), pg. 428

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

PP5

The young Churchill was Great Britain's Minister for War and Air during this period.

Increasingly, it was he who directed the invasion of the Soviet Union by the Allies (

- Great Britan,
- the US,
- France,
- Japan
- and several other nations)

on the side of the counter-revolutionary "White Army."

Years later,
Churchill the historian was to record his views
of this singular affair for posterity:

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

PP6

Were they [the Allies] at war with Soviet Russia?

Certainly NOT;

- BUT they shot Soviet Russians at sight.
- They stood as invaders on Russian soil.
- They armed the enemies of the Soviet Government.
- They blockaded its ports,
- and sunk its battleships.
- They earnestly desired and schemed its downfall.

But war... shocking!

Interference... shame!

"It was," they repeated,

"a matter of indifference to them how Russians settled their own internal affairs. "

They were impartial... Bang!

-Winston Churchill, "The World Crisis: The Aftermath (London, 1929), pg. 235.

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

(Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 7 – 10)

PP 7

What was there about this Bolshevik Revolution
that so alarmed the most powerful nations in the world?

What drove them to invade a land
whose soldiers had recently
fought alongside them for over three years
and suffered more casualties
than any other country on either side of the World War?

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

PP 8

The Bolsheviks had had the audacity
to make a separate peace with Germany
in order to take leave of a war
they regarded as imperialist
and NOT in any way their war,
and to try and rebuild
a terribly weary and devastated Russia.

But the Bolsheviks had displayed the far greater audacity
of overthrowing a capitalist-feudal system
and proclaiming the first socialist state
in the history of the world.

This was uppityness
writ incredibly large.

This was

- the crime the Allies had to punish,
- the virus which had to be eradicated
lest it spread to their own people.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

PP 9

The invasion did NOT achieve its immediate purpose, but its consequences were nonetheless profound and persist to the present day.

Professor D.F. Fleming,
the Vanderbilt University historian of the Cold War,
has noted:

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

PP 10

For the American people
the cosmic tragedy of the interventions in Russia
does NOT exist,
or it was an unimportant incident
long forgotten.

BUT for the Soviet peoples and their leaders
the period was a time of endless

- killing,
- of looting,
- and rapine,
- of plague
- and famine,
- of measureless suffering for scores of millions...

an experience burned into the very soul of a nation,
NOT to be forgotten
for many generations, if ever.

Also for many years the harsh Soviet regimentations
could ALL be justified
by fear that the capitalist powers
would be back to finish the job.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

It is NOT strange that in his address in New York, September 17, 1959

Premier Khrushchev should remind us of the interventions,

"the time you sent your troops to quell the revolution," as he put it.

-D.F. Fleming, "The Western Intervention in the Soviet Union, 1918-1920,"

New World Review (New York), Fall 1967;

-see also Fleming, "The Cold War and its Origins, 1917-1960

(New York, 1961), pg. 16-35

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

(Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 11 – 14)

PP 11

In what could be taken
as a portent of superpower insensitivity,
a 1920 Pentagon report on the intervention reads:
“This expedition affords one of the finest examples in history of honorable, unselfish dealings...
under very difficult circumstances
to be helpful to a people struggling to achieve a new liberty.”
-Los Angeles Times 2 September, 1991, pg. 1

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

PP 12

History does NOT tell us
what a Soviet Union,
allowed to develop in a (so called) "normal" way
of its own choosing,
would look like today.

We do know, however,
the nature of a Soviet Union

- attacked in its cradle,
- raised alone in an extremely hostile world,
- and, when it managed to survive to adulthood,
- overrun by the Nazi war machine
- with the blessings of the Western Powers.

The resulting insecurities and fears
have inevitably led to (so called) deformities of character
NOT unlike that found in an individual raised in a similar life-threatening manner.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

PP 13

We in the West are never allowed to forget
the political shortcomings (real and bogus)
of the Soviet Union;
at the same time we are never reminded
of the history which lies behind it.

The anti-communist propaganda campaign
began even earlier than the military intervention.

Before the year 1918 was over,
expressions in the vein of

- "Red Peril,"
- "the Bolshevik assault on civilization," and
- "menace to world by Reds is seen"

had become commonplace
in the pages of the New York Times.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

PP 14

During February and March 1919,
a US Senate Judiciary Subcommittee held hearings
before which many "Bolshevik horror stories"
were presented.

The character of some of the testimony
can be gauged by the headline
in the usually sedate Times of 12 February 1919:

DESCRIBE HORRORS UNDER RED RULE.
R.E. SIMONS AND W.W. WELSH TELL SENATORS
OF BRUTALITIES OF BOLSHEVIKI

- STRIP WOMEN IN STREETS
- PEOPLE OF EVERY CLASS
EXCEPT THE SCUM
SUBJECTED TO VIOLENCE BY MOBS.

^

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

(Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 15 – 16)

pp 15

Historian Federick Lewis Schuman has written:

“The net result of these hearings... was to picture Soviet Russia
as a kind of bedlam inhabited by abject slaves
completely at the mercy of an organization of homicidal maniacs
whose purpose was to destroy all traces of civilization
and carry the nation back to barbarism.”

-Federick L. Schuman, “American Policy Toward Russia Since 1917” (New York, 1928), pg. 125

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 16

Literally NO story about the Bolsheviks was

- too contrived,
- too bizarre,
- too grotesque, or
- too perverted

to be printed and widely believed;

from woman being nationalized

to babies being eaten

(as the early pagans believed the Christians guilty of devouring their children;

the same was believed of the Jews in the Middle Ages).

The story about women with ALL the lurid connotations of

- state property,
- compulsory marriage,
- "free love," etc.

"was broadcasted over the country through a thousand channels,"

wrote Schuman,

"and perhaps did more than anything else

to stamp the Russian Communists

in the minds of most American citizens

as criminal perverts."

-Ibid., pg. 154

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

This tale continued to receive great currency
even after the State Department was obliged to announce that it was a fraud.

(That the Soviets eat their babies
was still being taught by the John Birch Society
to its large audience
at least as late as 1978.)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

(Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 17 – 18)

pp 17

By the end of 1919,
when the defeat of the Allies and the White Army appeared likely,
the New York Times treated its readers
to headlines and stories such as the following:

30 Dec. 1919:	"Reds Seek War with America"
9 Jan. 1920:	"Official quarters' describe the Bolshevik menace in the Middle East as ominous"
11 Jan. 1920:	"Allied officials and diplomats [envisage] a possible invasion of Europe"
13 Jan. 1920:	"Allied diplomatic circles" fear an invasion of Persia
16 Jan. 1920:	A page-one head-line, eight columns wide: "Britain Facing War with Reds, Calls Council in Paris." "Well-informed diplomats" expect both a military invasion of Europe and a Soviet advance into Eastern and Southern Asia.

The following morning, however, we could read:

	"No War with Russia, Allies to Trade with Her"
7 Feb. 1920:	"Reds Raising Army to Attack India"
11 Feb. 1920:	"Fear that Bolsheviks will Now Invade Japanese Territory"

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 18

Readers of the New York Times were asked to believe that ALL these invasions were to come from a nation that was shattered as few nations in history have been; a nation still

- recovering from a horrendous world war;
- in extreme chaos from a fundamental social revolution that was barely off the ground;
- engaged in a brutal civil war against forces backed by the major powers of the world;
- its industries, never advanced to begin with, in a shambles;
- and the country in the throes of a famine that was to leave many millions dead before it subsided.

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

(Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 19 – 22)

pp 19

In 1920, The New Republic magazine
presented a lengthy analysis of the news coverage
by the New York Times
of the Russian Revolution
and the (u.s.) intervention.

Amongst much else,
it observed that in the two years following the November 1917 revolution,
the Times had stated
NO less than 91 times that

*“the soviets were nearing their rope’s end
or actually had reached it.”*

-New Republic, 4 Augst 1920, a 42-page analysis by Walter Lippmann and Charles Merz.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 20

If this was reality
as presented by the United states' (so-called) "newspaper of record,"
one can imagine only with dismay
the witch's brew
that rest of the nation's newspapers
were feeding to their readers.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 21

This, then, was the American people's first experience of a new social phenomenon that had come upon the world, their introductory education about the Soviet Union and this thing called "communism."

The students have never recovered from the lesson. Neither has the Soviet Union.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 22

The military intervention came to an end
but, with the sole and partial exception of the Second World War period,
the propaganda offensive has never let up.

In 1943 Life magazine devoted an entire issue
in honor of the Soviet Union's accomplishments,
going far beyond what was demanded
by the need for wartime solidarity,
going so far
as to call Lenin "perhaps the greatest man of modern time."

Two years later, however,
with Harry Truman sitting in the White House,
such fraternity
had NO chance of surviving.

Truman, after all,
was the man who, the day after the Nazis invaded the Soviet Union,
said: "If we see that Germany is winning,
we ought to help Russia,
and if Russia is winning,
we ought to help Germany,
and that way let them kill as many as possible,
although I don't want to see Hitler victorious in any circumstances."

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

*Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 23)*

pp 23

Much propaganda mileage has been squeezed out of the Soviet-German treaty of 1939, made possible ONLY by entirely ignoring the fact that the Russians were forced into the pact by the repeated refusal of the Western powers, particularly the United States and Great Britain, to unite with Moscow in a stand against Hitler; as they (the United States and Great Britain) likewise refused to come to the aid of the socialist-oriented Spanish government under siege by the German, Italian and Spanish fascists beginning in 1936.

Stalin realized that if the West wouldn't save Spain, they certainly wouldn't save the Soviet Union.

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

(Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 24 - 27)

pp 24

From the Red scare of the 1920s
to the McCarthyism of the 1950s
to the Reagan Crusade against the (so called) Evil Empire of the 1980s,
the American people have been subjected to a relentless
anti-communist indoctrination.

It is imbibed with their mother's milk,
pictured in their comic books,
spelled out in their school books;
their daily paper offers them headlines that tell them all they (think they) need to know;
ministers find sermons in it,
politicians are elected with it,
and Reader's Digest becomes rich on it.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 25

The fiercely-held conviction inevitably produced
by this insidious assault upon the intellect
is that a great damnation has been unleashed upon the world,
possibly by the devil himself,
but in the form of people;
people NOT motivated by the same
needs, fears, emotions, and personal morality
that govern others of the species,
BUT (rather) people engaged in an extremely clever, monolithic, international conspiracy dedicated to taking over the world and enslaving it;
for reasons NOT always clear perhaps,
BUT (so called) evil needs NO motivation save evil itself.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

Moreover, any appearance or claim by these people to be rational human beings
seeking a better kind of world or society
is a sham, a cover-up,
to delude others,
and proof only of their cleverness;
the (so called) repression and cruelties which have taken place in the Soviet Union
are (allegedly) forever proof of the bankruptcy of virtue
and the evil intentions of these people
in whichever country they may be found,
under whatever name they may call themselves;
and, most important of all,
the only choice open to anyone in the United States
is between the American Way of Life
and the Soviet Way of Life,
that nothing lies between or beyond
these two ways of making the world.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 26

This is how it looks to the simple folk of America.

One finds that the (so-called) sophisticated,
when probed slightly beneath the surface of their academic language,
see it exactly the same way.

pp 27

To the mind carefully brought to adulthood in the United States,
the (so called) truths of anticommunism are self-evident,
as self-evident as the flatness of the world once was to an earlier mind;

(and) as the Russian people believed that the victims of Stalin's purges were truly guilty of treason.

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

*(Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 28 - 30)*

pp 28

The foregoing slice of American history
must be taken into account
if one is to make sense of the vagaries of American foreign policy
since the end of World War II,
specifically the record,
as presented in this book,
of what

- the US military
 - and the CIA
 - and other branches of the US government
- have done to the peoples of the world.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 29

In 1918, the barons of American capital
needed NO reason for their war against communism
other than the threat to their

- wealth and
- privilege,

although their opposition was (deceptively only) expressed in terms of moral indignation.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 30

During the period between the two world wars,
US gunboat diplomacy
operated in the Caribbean
to make (so called) "The American Lake"
safe for the fortunes of United Fruit and W.R. Grace & Co., (yet) at the same time taking care to warn
of the (so called) "the Bolshevik threat"
to ALL that is decent
from the likes of Nicaraguan rebel Augusto Sandino.

Λ

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

*(Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 31 - 33)*

pp 31

By the end of the Second World War,
every American past the age of 40
had been subjected to some 25 years of anti-communist radiation,
the average incubation period needed to produce a malignancy.

Anti-communism
had developed a life of its own,
independent of its capitalist father.

Increasingly, in the post-war period,
middle-aged Washington policy makers and diplomats
saw the world out there as one composed of "communists" and "Anti-communists," whether of nations, movements or individuals.

This comic-strip vision of the world,
with (so called) righteous American supermen fighting communist evil everywhere,
had graduated from a cynical propaganda exercise
to a moral imperative of US foreign policy.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 32

Even the concept of "non-communist,"
implying some measure of neutrality,
has generally been accorded scant legitimacy
in this paradigm.

John Foster Dulles,
one of the major architects of post-war US foreign policy,
expressed this succinctly
in his typically simple, moralistic way:

"For us there are two sorts of people in the world:
there are those who are Christians
and support free enterprise
and there are the others. "

As several of the case studies
in the present book confirm,
Dulles put that creed into rigid practice.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 33

The word "communist" (as well as "Marxist") has been so overused and so abused by American leaders and the media
as to render it virtually meaningless.

(the [so called] Left
has done the same to the word "fascist.")

But merely having a name for something...
witches or flying saucers...
attaches a certain credence to it.

^

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

(Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 34 - 35)

pp 34

At the same time,
the American public, as we have seen,
has been soundly conditioned to react Pavlovianly to the term (communism):
it means, still, the worst excesses of Stalin,
from wholesale purges
to Siberian slave labor camps;
it means, as Michael Parenti has observed,
that "Classic Marxist-Leninist predictions [concerning world revolution]
are treated as statements of intent
directing all present-day communist actions"
It means "us" against "them."

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 35

And 'them' can mean

- a peasant in the Philippines,
- a mural-painter in Nicaragua,
- a legally-elected prime minister in British Guiana,
- a European intellectual,
- a Cambodian neutralist,
- an African nationalist...

ALL, somehow, part of the same monolithic conspiracy;
each, in some way, a threat to the American Way of Life;

NO land

- too small,
- too poor, or
- too far away

to pose such a threat,
the "communist threat."

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

(Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 36 - 38)

pp 36

The cases presented in this book
illustrate that it has been largely irrelevant
whether the particular targets of intervention – be they

- individuals,
- political parties,
- movements or
- governments –

called themselves “communist” or NOT.

It has mattered little whether they

- were scholars of dialectical materialism
- or had never heard of Karl Marx;
- whether they were atheists
- or priests;
- whether a strong and influential Communist Party was in the picture
- or not;
- whether the government had come into being through violent revolution
- or peaceful elections...

all have been targets,

all (so called) “communists.”

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 37

It has mattered still less
that the Soviet KGB was in the picture.

The assertion has been frequently voiced
that the CIA
carries out its dirty tricks
largely in reaction to operations of the KGB
which have been "even dirtier."

This is a lie
made out of whole cloth.

There may be an isolated incident of such
in the course of the CIA's life,
but it has kept itself well hidden.

The relationship between the two sinister agencies
is marked by fraternization
and respect for fellow professionals more than by hand-to-hand combat.

Former CIA officer John Stockwell
has written:

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

Actually, at least in more routine operations,
case officers most fear

- the US ambassador and his staff,
- then restrictive head-quarters cables,
- then curious, gossipy neighbors in the local community,

as potential threats to operations.

Next would come

- the local police,
- then the press.
- Last of all is the KGB –
in my twelve years of case officering
I never saw or heard of a situation
in which the KGB attacked or obstructed a CIA operation.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 38

Stockwell adds that the various intelligence services do NOT want their world to be "complicated" by murdering each other.

It isn't done.

If a CIA case officer has a flat tire
in the dark of night on a lonely road,
he will NOT hesitate to accept a ride from a KGB officer – likely the two would detour to some bar for a drink together.

In fact CIA and KGB officers entertain each other frequently in their homes.

The CIA's files are full of mention of such relationships
in almost every African station.

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

*Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 39 - 40)*

pp 39

Proponents of "fighting fire with fire"
come perilously close at times
to arguing that if the KGBV, for example,
had a hand
in the overthrow of the Czechoslovak government in 1968, (then) it is OK for the CIA
to have a hand in the overthrow of the Chilean government in 1973.

It's as if the (alleged) destruction of democracy by the KGB
deposits funds in a (figurative) bank account
from which the CIA is then justified in making withdrawals.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 40

What then has been the thread common to the diverse targets of American intervention which has brought down upon them the wrath, and often the fire power, of the world's most powerful nation?

In virtually every case involving the Third world described in this book, it has been, in one form or another, a policy of "self-determination:" the desire, born of perceived

- need and
- principle,

to pursue a path of development

independent of US foreign policy objective.

Most commonly, this has been manifested in

- (a) the ambition to free themselves from economic and political subservience to the United States;
- (b) the refusal to minimize relations with the socialist bloc, or suppress the left at home, or welcome an American military installation on their soil; in short, a refusal to be a pawn in the Cold war; or
- (c) the attempt to alter or replace a government which held to neither of the aspirations: i.e., a government supported by the United States.

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

*Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 41 - 43)*

pp 41

It cannot be emphasized too strongly that such a policy of independence
has been viewed and expressed by numerous

- Third World leaders
- and revolutionaries

as one NOT to be equated by definition to

- anti-Americanism
- or pro-communism,

BUT as simply a determination
to maintain a position of

- neutrality and
- non-alignment

vis-à-vis the two superpowers.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 41 (continued)

Time and time again,
however,
it will be seen that the United States
was NOT prepared to live with this proposition.

Ar-benz of Gua-te-ma-la,
Mos-sa-degh of Iran,
Su-kar-no of In-do-nes-ia,
Nkru-mah of Gha-na,
Ja-gan of British Gui-a-na,
Si-ha-nouk of Cambodia...
ALL, insisted

Uncles Sam, must declare themselves
unequivocally on the side of "The Free World"
or suffer the consequences.

Nk-ru-mah put the case for non-alignment
as follows:

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 42

The experiment which we tried in Ghana was essentially one of developing the country in co-operation with the world as a whole.

Non-alignment meant exactly what it said.
We were NOT hostile to the countries of the socialist world in the way in which the governments of the old colonial territories were.

It should be remembered that while Britain pursued at home co-existence with the Soviet Union this was never allowed to extend to British colonial territories.

Books on socialism, which were published and circulated freely in Britain, were banned in the British colonial empire, and after Ghana became independent it was assumed abroad that it would continue to follow the same restrictive ideological approach.

When we behaved as did the British in their relations with the socialist countries we were accused of being pro-Russian and introducing the most dangerous ideas into Africa.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 43

It is reminiscent of the 19th-century American South,
where many Southerners were deeply offended
that so many of their black slaves
had (so called) deserted to the Northern side of the Civil War.

They had genuinely thought that the blacks should have been grateful
for all their white masters had done for them,
and that they were happy and content with their lot.

The noted Louisiana surgeon and psychologist Dr. Samuel A. Cartwright argued that many of the slaves suffered from a form of mental illness,
which he called "drape-to-man-ia,"
diagnosed as the uncontrollable urge to escape from slavery (and which sounds as patently absurd
as so-called Trump-derangement syndrome).

In the second half of the 20th-century,
this (so called) illness,
in the Third World,
has usually been called "communism."

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

*Excerpts from the 1987 edition
A brief history of the Cold War and Anti-communism
paragraphs 44 - 51)*

pp 44

Perhaps the most deeply ingrained reflex
of kneejerk anti-communism
is the belief that the Soviet Union (or Cuba or Vietnam, etc, acting as Moscow's surrogate)
is a clandestine force
lurking behind the façade of self-determination,
stirring up the hydra of revolution, or just plain trouble,
here, there, and everywhere;
yet another incarnation,
although on a far grander scale,
of the proverbial "outside agitator,"
he who has made his appearance regularly throughout history...

- King George blamed the French for inciting the American colonies to revolt...
- disillusioned American farmers and veterans protesting their onerous economic circumstances after the revolution (shays' Rebellion)
were branded as British agents out to wreck the new republic...
- labor strikes in late-19th century America were blamed on "anarchists" and "foreigners,"
- during the First World War on "German agents,"
- (and) after the war on "Bolsheviks."

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 45

And in the 1960s, said the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence, J. Edgar Hoover "helped spread the view among police ranks that any kind of mass protest is due to a conspiracy promulgated (or promoted) by agitators, often Communists, 'who misdirect otherwise contented people.'"

pp 46

The Last
is the key phrase,
one which encapsulates the conspiracy mentality
of those in power;
the idea that NO people,
except those living under the enemy,
could be so miserable and discontent
as to need recourse to revolution
or even mass protest;
(and) that it is only the agitation of the outsider
which misdirects them along this path.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 47

Accordingly, if Ronald Reagan were to concede that the masses of El Salvador have every good reason to rise up against their god-awful existence, it would bring into question

- his accusation,
- and the rationale for UIS intervention,

that it is principally (only?) the Soviet Union and its Cuban and Nicaraguan allies who instigate the Salvadoreans: that seemingly magical power of communists everywhere who, with a twist of their red wrist, can transform peaceful, happy people into furious guerrillas.

The CIA knows how difficult a feat this is.

The Agency, as we shall see, tried to spark mass revolt in

- China,
- Cuba,
- the Soviet Union,
- Albania,
- and elsewhere in Eastern Europe

with a singular lack of success.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 47 continued...

The Agency's scribes have laid the blame for these failures
on the "closed" nature of the societies involved.

BUT in non-communist countries,
the CIA has had to resort to military coups
or extra-legal chicanery
to get its people into power.
It has never been able to light the fire
of popular revolution.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 48

For Washington to concede merit and virtue
to a particular Third World insurgency
would, moreover, raise the question:
Why does NOT the United States,
if it must intervene,
take the side of the rebels?

Not only might this better serve the cause of

- human rights
- and justice,

BUT it would shut out the Russians
from their alleged role.

What better way to frustrate
the International Communist Conspiracy?
But this is a question
that dares NOT speak its name in the Oval Office,
a question that is relevant to many of the cases in this book.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 49

Instead, the United States remains committed to its all-too-familiar policy of establishing and/or supporting the most vile tyrannies in the world, whose outrages against their own people confront us daily in the pages of our newspapers:

- brutal massacres;
- systematic, sophisticated torture;
- public whippings;
- soldiers and police firing into crowds;
- government-supported death squads;
- tens of thousands of disappeared persons;
- extreme economic deprivation...

a way of life that is virtually a monopoly held by America's allies,

from Guatemala, Chile and El Salvador to Turkey, Pakistan and Indonesia,

all members in good standing of the (so called) Holy War Against Communism,

all members of "The (so called) Free World,"

that region of which we hear so much and see so little.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 50

The restriction on civil liberties
found in the communist bloc,
as severe as they (allegedly) are,
pale by comparison to the cottage-industry Auschwitzes
of "The (so called) Free World,"
and, except in that curious mental landscape
inhabited by The Compleat Anti-Communist,
can have little or nothing to do with the sundry American interventions
supposedly in the cause of a higher good.

(continued)

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 51

It is interesting to note
that as commonplace as it is for American leaders
to speak of freedom and democracy
while supporting dictatorships,
so do Russian leaders speak of wars of

- liberation,
- anti-imperialism and
- anti-colonialism

while doing extremely little
to actually further these causes,
American propaganda notwithstanding.

The Soviets like to be thought of
as champions of the Third World,
but they have stood by doing little more than going "tsk, tsk"
as progressive movements and governments, even Communist Parties, in

- Greece,
- Guatemala,
- British Guiana,
- Chile,
- Indonesia,
- the Philippines
- and elsewhere

have gone to the wall with American complicity.

^

William Blum's "Unaliving Hope" (an exploration of Capitalist Interventions in Socialist Countries)- Introduction

pp 52

(continued)